Refrigerant Transition and Recovery Certification Program Exam Results

FERRIS STATE UNIVERSITY
MICHIGAN'S APPLIED POLYTECHNIC UNIVERSITY

This is the official confirmation of your test results on the Refrigeration Transition and Recovery Certification exam, which has been scored by the Technology Transfer Center at Ferris State University. In order to obtain certification, you must pass the core exam, in addition to successful completion of each certification level you wish to obtain.

Certification types as specified by Section 608 of the Clean Air Act:

- Type I: Small appliances with 5 pounds or less of refrigerant
- Type II: High pressure and very high pressure appliances
- Type III: Low pressure appliances
- Universal: Certification in Type I, II, and III

Enclosed in this envelope is your wallet card and wall certificate, which specifies your certification level.

Certificates and cards are printed using automated methods. If you find that there is an error in any of your certification materials, please note the correction directly on the certificate and card. Return all incorrect material to the address below, and a new certificate and card will be issued to you. Any questions or comments concerning your test score or the testing process should be directed in writing to:

Refrigerant Certification Exam, Technology Transfer Center
1020 East Maple Street, Big Rapids, Michigan 49307-1649

Retest Options

If you did not successfully complete the exam, or would like to repeat or attempt additional exam sections, the following exam retest options are available to you.

1. Contact the provider of your first test to determine if and when future test dates are available.
2. Contact Drake Training and Technologies at 800-578-EXAM. Drake provides a computerized version of the Refrigerant Transition and Recovery Certification Exam at over 200 sites throughout the United States. When arranging for your test date, be sure to specify that you will be taking a retake exam.
3. Contact the Air Conditioning Contractors of America at 202-483-9370 to learn which ACCA chapters or community colleges in your area participate in this certification program.

Ferris State University does not provide exam retests directly to individual program participants, but only through ACCA-registered exam proctors.
